RING OF STEEL INCLOSES BOLSHEVISTS

Strongholds of bolshevism are menaced by the concerted advances of the armies of the White Russians and their allies. This map shows how Gen. Denikin is approaching Moscow across the plains of southwestern Russia; Gen. Yudenich, coming from the east, may be actually in possession of Petrograd. Admiral Kolchak's forces in Siberia have recovered from recent reverses and are pressing forward. The North Russian army is following the line of Volodga railway southward. The Finnish army is in action forty miles north of Petrograd. To the south, the Poles and Lithuanians are advancing and Gen. Petlura's Ukrainian forces are to the right of them.

The other belligerents before the United States entered the war, those originating after the declaration of war and consisting not alone of war losses but actual losses, but claims as well for restitution of the property of Americans in Germany, seized by the German government as a measure of reprisal for the sinking of the Lusitania. Whether or not these claims are to be included in the final settlement is not yet determined, so far as officials here are informed, although the United States, under the provisions of the treaty, can collect these and any other claims which it desires to present, so drastic are the treaty's terms.

Dealt With Leniently. Information reaching the United States through domestic and other channels indicates that the property of Americans in Germany was not always disturbed by the German government. Industries in which Americans were interested were in some instances sold, but private properties, it is reported, were dealt with more or less leniently, evidently in pursuance of a hope that such a policy would soften America's peace terms. By the conditions of the treaty as signed at Versailles, the right to bring any action for recovery or to question the justice of American enactments or policies.

At the same time the American government recognizes that it cannot simply confiscate German property without rendering an accounting, and the treaty provides, broadly, that the property so seized, or the money resulting from its liquidation, first, to pay claims; second, may be turned into the general reparations fund; or third, turned back to the original German owners. Germany relinquishes all title both for herself and her nationals, but despite this fact it is probable that the government will recommend the return of the smaller holdings taken from enemy aliens in this country whose conduct during the war did not bring them into conflict with wartime enactments.

In the end the final disposition of all such property will be determined by congress, under the provisions of the treaty and the trading with the enemy act. Under the treaty Germany agrees further to compensate her nationals for all property seized and retained by the allied or associated powers. Another drastic provision of the treaty requires that Germany, within six months from the coming into force of that document, shall deliver to each of the allies and the United States all securities, deeds or other documents of title of every character, now held by German nationals and relating to property, rights or interests in the territory of the allies or the United States.

FOR TIRE SERVICE

American financial and business interests feel also that the treaty is necessary to stabilize credits and international obligations. Rates of exchange are affected by the delay in peace.

Summed up, government officials assert America's interests are at a distinct disadvantage and will continue to be until the treaty is ratified.

HELD BY GRAND JURY

Twenty Counts in the indictment Against Dejavon Smith, Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Oct. 31.—Dejavon Smith, Lake Forest, Ill., publisher of the Indianapolis News, was arrested here yesterday by United States Marshal Storen on federal grand jury indictment. The indictment resulted from an investigation into the affairs of Charles Warren Fairbanks, former vice-president of the United States, who is said to have owned 75 per cent of stock of the newspaper, while Mr. Smith was represented in postal statements to have been sole owner.

Smith was released when he gave bond of $10,000.

Saves Officers Trouble. Early yesterday Ferdinand Winter, attorney, telephoned Mr. Storen that Mr. Smith was in his office and that if he had an affidavit for Mr. Smith's arrest he could be found there. The captives for the arrest have been in Mr. Storen's possession since late last week. It is said Mr. Smith came here aware of that fact, to save federal officers the trouble of going to Lake Forest.

In a statement published Sept. 5, the News said that Mr. Fairbanks acquired a three-fourths interest in the paper June 4, 1918, just prior to his death. It is said the grand jury reported he had owned such interest since Oct. 1, 1912.

First Four—Having caused Hilton U. Brown to make false affidavits.

Second Four—Having procured Brown to make such statements.

Third Four—Having published false affidavits.

Fourth Four—Having transmitted same to United States officer.

Fifth Four—Having caused such affidavit to be transmitted. The indictment was returned under Section 23 of the criminal code which makes it an offense to make false affidavits, render false bond, etc., for the purpose of defrauding the government.

The penalty is a fine of not more than $1,000, not more than ten years imprisonment, or both.

U. S. MARSHAL SHOT

Alexander, Ill., Oct. 31.—ICint O'Malley, deputy United States marshal, was shot and dangerously wounded yesterday by J. J. McVeigh, at Urbana, near here while the officer was attempting to arrest the man on the charge of using the mails to defraud. McVeigh is still at large. He is said to have recently served a two year term in the federal prison at Atlanta after conviction on the same kind of charge.
